

There's a new flea market in town!

Father's Day weekend in Aruba witnessed the opening of the Fleamaster market under the canopy next to City 1 on Sasaki Highway. Located just on the outskirts of Oranjestad, this new bargain center is offering a wide selection of souvenirs, resort wear and all sort so bric-a-brac at rock-bottom prices.

Though Fleamaster sound rather like the name for a ringmaster at a flea circus, one will find contains thirty-nine booths of every sort of merchandise, according to manager Hymie, aside from take away meals of native food at excellent prices. In good Latin American tradition, you can even haggle a bit if you buy more than one item.

If you are looking for good deals on Aruba logo gifts, some comfortable light clothing or a hammock for the backyard, then visit Aruba's newest shopping craze on Saturdays and Sundays; open from early morning until late afternoon.
